

IT

The world of IT is rapidly expanding. As technology continues to evolve, virtually all businesses are absorbing and integrating IT solutions to enhance their productivity and expand their market opportunities. That means that almost all industries today are potentially exposed to issues that can arise due to an IT breach or malfunction. When this happens, there is an increasing need to quantify damages that occurred as a result of these events.

Since the early days of information technology, MDD has been assisting clients by providing accurate, credible economic damage assessments pertaining to IT issues that have occurred both on-site or at data centers.

We have highly skilled professionals who speak the language of IT and understand how systems work both locally and over the internet. Our forensic accountants have been engaged on assignments across virtually all business sectors, including automotive, manufacturing, aviation, ecommerce, government, airports and school districts. We have helped businesses quantify damages relating to cyber breaches, inadvertent/mysterious data erasure, matters relating to employee sabotage, loss of power situations resulting in BI claims and loss of earnings at data warehouses.

When required, MDD can provide expert witness testimony, reports and documentation, case consultation, assistance with case preparation and other litigation support.
