

Income Replacement Benefits (Canada)

When accidents occur, it's imperative to calculate income replacement benefits (IRB) that are in accordance with the Statutory Accident Benefits Schedule (SABS). That's why so many organizations turn to the world's premier forensic accounting firm, MDD.

We're up to date on the latest automobile/accident legislation and arbitrations. Our trained professionals understand the type and scope of documentation required to successfully resolve a claim, whether it's for a self-employed individual or corporate employee.

Our experts investigate all claims and produce comprehensive reports that help insurers and lawyers provide a fair and accurate assessment.

Our professionals, and the services we provide, can also help facilitate prompt payment to the insured.

We provide the following services for accident benefits related matters:

- Calculation of income replacement benefits
- Computation of interest owing on benefits
- Evaluation of claimant's eligibility
- Assessment of dependence – financial and care
- Delivery of documentation and reports
- Expert and consulting witness testimony

Did you know that we have an Income Replacement Benefits Calculator that you can use to calculate your client's benefits? To find out more, please contact a member of our IRB Team using the details below. You can also register and/or login here.

Accident Benefits for Plaintiffs

When motor vehicle accidents occur, it is important to calculate income replacement benefits that are in accordance with the Statutory Accident Benefits Schedule (SABS).

In the last five years alone, we have assisted thousands of claimants in assessing benefits owed under the SABS. Thanks to the 2010 Ontario SABS legislation that requires the insurer to pay up to $2,500 for assessing income replacement benefits, claimants are able to engage an accountant, and not be out of pocket for their fees.
