

Construction Litigation

At MDD we understand the potential difficulties that may be encountered when construction projects go awry.

We are adept in assessing, organizing and analyzing financial document production, identifying key financial records for discovery requests and helping prepare interrogatories.

We are also able to critique opposing damage expert reports, suggest questions on damage measurements for deposition and assess the financial impact of various theoretical scenarios that may affect the project critical path during alternative dispute resolution.

As the world's premier forensic accounting firm, MDD has a wealth of expertise in construction litigation matters and has extensive experience in being deposed and testifying in both arbitration and court.

MDD provides construction related services such as:

- Evaluate accounting related aspects of claims
- Interview key personnel or witnesses
- Integrate financial aspects of the claim with facts and coverage issues
- Work cooperatively with authorities investigating the matter
- Prepare accounting reports that analyze the claim
- Aid the claims department and legal counsel throughout the claims process
- Assist in subrogation actions
- Providing insight to bond underwriters when a contract surety bond is involved
- Analyzing and categorizing contractor billings, job cost reports, supervisory reports, potential overruns and other relevant documentation

- Examining bank loans and interest documentation
- Analyzing damage components including equipment costs, increased payroll, general conditions, home-office overhead, soft costs and contractor lost profits
- Examining construction activity logs and record logs in conjunction with project timelines / critical path
- Presenting independent findings in written reports with supporting documents
- Providing expert testimony when necessary
